

For many Americans, the systemic barriers to accessing quality, affordable health care are far too high. For individuals with diabetes, they are often even higher.

From the skyrocketing cost of prescription drugs to limited access to health insurance, America's minority, low-income, and historically underserved communities have been without access to the resources they need to prevent the onset of diabetes, manage their condition once diagnosed, and live healthy lives. Now more than ever, it is imperative that we take action to ensure health equity for the 34 million Americans living with diabetes, 88 million living prediabetes, and the millions more at risk for developing the condition.

I, _____, pledge to support policies that improve health care access, quality, and outcomes for Americans with diabetes as outlined in the American Diabetes Association's Health Equity Bill of Rights.
